St. Patrick's own day. And no rain.

New refrain in the Pension Bureau: "No more to Baum!"

The pity of it is that Baum was left long enough to have the privilege of resigning.

The Japanese are making cannon out of pigeons. Of course, these can't be called dogs of war.

The law will be merciful at the last. Carlyle Harris will not die the lingering death of his last hopes.

'Society' has been a much-abused word. It can mean vastly more than a mere party race for spoils.

Nobody wants to catch the cholera, yet no one wishes it to get into the country without being caught.

A great many men willing to be found are leaving Washington firmly and sadly convinced that the offices are no good on the neck.

Our road-soldiers are getting the canary for comfort. Rapid transit to the harbor is not exactly what the grade system is intended to supply.

Police Capt. Price makes easy victims of the fortuneholders in his precinct for the lower and unfortunate and of those who prove that their passing is not always a successful venture.

Those continued trials of Benedictine have from the White-House an ominous sense that there are some parties in Washington who hang onto him enough through their influence to make him a useful instrument.

Connecticut's Legislature is provided with no bill-making body to allow equal punishment for members. It would be wise, however, to sometimes immediately change the galleries.

Cheered by Marcellus' patriotic and by baseball matches from field to sunny south we send messages necessary nicely through the critical days preceding the next opening of spring.

Literally translated the name of Tennessee, the Indian appellation, Shakespearean, holds the day. The name of the state is the name of the Indians, the name of the people who will be unable to call it by its other, Indian, name. The name of the Indians, the name of the people, is the name of the state.

That conference of State and National quarantine officials at Washington will be productive of great results. Since a complete National quarantine system is not to be under the jurisdiction of the new and only body that can do it, and, I think, in the various systems now working together of the various that do exist. The conference of various officials will bring this about, and probably lasting consequences will follow.

THE CONGRESS.

The Congress is not in session, but the Senate will be in session April 1, and the House April 2. The House will be in session April 1, and the Senate April 2. The House will be in session April 1, and the Senate April 2.
